you have to install (not only copy the efi-folder into the efi-partition) clover in bios / mbr mode, then compare the contents from macPeet's efi-folder with your fresh installed one, look for updated versions of the containing ... text and ... efi-files, and if there are existing updates use them instead in the appropriate folders.

I swear I've done that. I used Clover r5120, than copied the drivers64 files from MacPeet drivers into my drivers / BIOS folder, copied the ACPI folder, config.plist, and necessary kexts. Trying as I type this...
